

PHILOSOPHY
(specialty 09.00.13)

Kotlyarova V.V. Modern value crisis and search of human values

The article examines the problem of crisis of values in today's world. The main trend of the axiological dynamics of contemporary Russian society is value shift, the rise of "fractional" value consciousness of Russians under the influence of several factors and axiological asymmetry. What is happening at the moment the change of values in Russian society is a revolutionary step in the transformation of values, which do not always end with the creation of a new hierarchy of values. It can lead to archaism, takes positive and negative forms. Attempt to answer the question, what are the universal human values and how they relate to cultural traditions, ideals, and values of the multinational Russian society. Exit from the crisis of value is possible only through the formation of new values based on historical continuity - human, that have a meaningful and vital content, and they focused deeply weathered experience of humanity and its aspirations. In today's world, the role of human values as major culture factor.

Key words: value crisis, values, culture, human values.

South-Russian state university of economics and service

April, 17, 2011
