Ageeva N.A. Sociocultural patterns as an effective means of spiritual revival of family and society

In this paper we assume that to see the fate of the individual is difficult, but to analyze current trends and predict the vector of development of society can and should be carried out. Family is a major source of social and economic development of society, because it cultivates the main wealth of the society - human being. We believe that the spiritual crisis that absorbs majority of Russian families can lead to global instability in the society. The way out of this impasse is the development of the state of the complex socio-economic measures, among which an important place takes familiarizing the younger generation to faith and cultural traditions of the people through the promotion of healthy lifestyles and creating social demand patterns and behaviors that, in addition to appeal will be held in mass and a high sense of moral values.

Key words: dehumanization, sociocultural patterns, barbarism and carnivalization of the consciousness.
