Babaytsev A.V. Symbols in social interaction: mediation of social relations

It is given different approaches to understand the function of the mediator of characters that is an element of social interaction (individual and group). Characters also represent the interests of the subjects and objects of the political process. When the subject is a political power, and the object – a society, you have the following options for social interaction: the lack of interaction, interaction with the change of the system, the transformation of a mediator-symbol, the same (proportional) interaction, disproportionate (strong or weak) response action. Various versions of the interactions with the built-in symbols are able to regulate social relations, constructing a certain social order.

Keywords: symbol, social interactions, symbolic mediator, mediation, collective behavior.
