Ostrikova G.N. On the expressiveness of anatiosemantic lexical phraseological units in German

The article discusses enantiosemic lexical phraseological units as the phenomenon of more complex plan than enantiosemic lexical units because of the differences of the semantic and structural changes. It is identified and considered a special emotional expressive evaluation of enantiosemy. It is established that the high operation force of enantiosemic lexical phraseology is often associated with an inner form that causes certain associations in the implementation of units in speech, as well as with the specific situation which dictates a positive or negative connotation.

Key words: opposite values, phraseological unit, nominative and attitudinal enantiosemy, context, irony.
