

LINGUISTICS
(specialty 10.02.19)

Agapova S.G. Hermeneutics knowledge in description of communicative processes

The article touches upon hermeneutics as theory of human understanding in interpretative aspect defining a set of practices to specify concrete meaning in an unclear text or text analogue. First systemized by theologians, hermeneutics has assimilated in the framework of communication research, assisting in definition of the original, “unbiased” meaning of a text or a dialogue. Hermeneutics focuses upon the meaning and products of discourse, including linguistic intention, logical sense, emotional components and human behavioral principles in the content of a text. Hence the necessity to analyze hermeneutic view in regards to social interaction.

Key words: hermeneutics, interpretation, text analysis, meaning of text, discourse, communication, hermeneutic circle, pragmatics, linguistic intention, social interaction.

Southern federal university.

Rostov-on-Don, Russia

September, 18, 2013
