

PSYCHOLOGY
(specialty 19.00.03)

Korneeva Ya.A., Degteva G.N., Simonova N.N., Fedotov D.M., Dubinina N.I. Psychological peculiarities of working population with different level of weather sensitivity in the Far North

Assessment of climatic and geographical factors that influence the health of people living in extreme the North conditions, there is a topical issue in connection with the ongoing changes in climate and weather, increasing number of weather anomalies. The reactions occurring under the influence of climatic and geographical factors are defined as meteosensitivity. The paper defines the psychological characteristics of the working population (regulatory processes, the level of subjective control, accentuation of character and Coping strategies) with different levels of meteosensitivity.

Key words: meteosensitivity, meteutropic reaction, the Far North.

North state medical university of

Russian Health Ministry. Arkhangelsk, Russia

September, 14, 2013
