Role of information links and documents in life activity of native khanty and mansy peoples

First attempt to consider the history of indigenous peoples through the prism of documents as a whole livelihood. In various fields relevant to the documents as values at Khanty and Mansy peoples was different. For the history of the life and activity of the people, especially small, are significant any documents, regardless of their area of operation. For the history of the life and activity of the people, especially small, are significant any documents, regardless of their area of operation. Today we are at the stage of a full discussion of the significance of the document in the life of a particular community. Gradually formed interdisciplinary approach to the study of this object, which gives some results, both in theoretical and practical terms. Retrospective analysis paints a picture of the functioning of the document in the past, the degree of awareness of their importance at different stages of the history of the Khanty and Mansi, the nature of their relationship with the socio-communicative processes and the impact on them, and on different levels - personal, group, community.

Key words: documents, history, life support, information.
