

LINGUISTICS

Shamne N.L.

(Volgograd state university. Volgograd, Russia)

Sociolinguistic aspects of migrants integration problem

The article deals with the problem of migrant's integration into a new cultural environment in the context of ecolinguistics. The focal point is characteristics of the current language situation and roles distribution between the Russian and native languages in the process of migrants adaptation. The author also gives analyses of in-depth interviews aimed to determine language value in the multilingual population life of the Volgograd region. An interview guide based on the features of the current language situation in the Volgograd region was developed. Multistage model of cultural and linguistic adaptation considers various age categories of migrants aimed to optimize the process of migrants adaptation into a certain linguo-cultural ecosystem was proposed.

Key words: ecolinguistics, other cultural environment, language situation, migrants integration, in-depth interview.

July, 30, 2014