Implication of contextual antonyms in the Chechen and Russian languages

The comparative-typological features are considered as contextual antonyms in the Chechen and Russian languages. It is established that antonymous components of contextual antonyms exist only in a certain context, while lexical antonyms remain antonymous and out of context. Therefore, contextual antonyms are created and implied in literature to create a sharp contrast. The means of formation and the sphere of the implication of lexical antonyms are endless.

Key words: context, lexical antonyms, antonym in language, the Chechen language, the Russian language.
