Phraseological units with a component-zoonym, denoting internal qualities of a human

Russian and French phraseological units with a component-zoonym, are viewed in an aspect of anthropomorphous semantics (internal human qualities). In the process of semantic analysis we can find not just universal characteristics, but also national and culturological features of russian and french animalistic phraseology, which is made because of the revelation of non-equivalent components and lacunar meanings of language units.

Key words: phraseology, phraseologism, phraseological unit, zoonym, contrasting linguistics, lingvo cultural studies.
