

PEDAGOGY

N.N. Rodionova, S.A. Nazarov

(Lugansk state university of Taras Shevchenko. Lugansk. Kamensk institute (branch) South-Russian state polytechnical university (NPI) of M.I. Platov. Kamensk-Shakhtinsky, Russia)

New directions in training of skilled workers in the system of vocational education

The results of research of features and modern progress of the system of trade education trends are presented. It is determined key characteristics of directions and tendencies according to which trade education system reform is possible. In the number of basic tendencies of trade education development, in modern conditions of labor market functioning, it is worth to underline the standardization and variation of training programs. It is defined the possibilities and advantages of application of the distance controlled technologies in the process of training of qualified personnel. Science and practice positions are systematized in relation to realization of competence approach to the modern pedagogical process of trade education establishments. In basis of modernization of qualified personnel trade education system is expedient to put the following principle bases: humanizing of trade education system, priority of common to all mankind values of student, upgrading quality of educational services for the different groups of population.

Key words: vocational education, development, competence approach, standardization, variety, educational programs, remote technologies, educational standards.

July, 28, 2016