Phenomenon of terrorism and extremism as an object of scientific analysis

It is considered the philosophical, historical, legal, and psychological foundations of the study of modern extremism and terrorism. It is analyzed the patterns and tendencies of the spread of extremism in Russia, formulated the conclusion about the connection between these phenomena and the uncertain social status of a person, socio-economic, socio-political, and spiritual and cultural situation in society. It has been determined that, despite a significant number of studies, the perception of terrorism and extremism is characterized by the lack of a unified view in the scientific and expert environment regarding the essential features of extremist activity.

Key words: scientific knowledge, terrorism, extremism, pseudo-values, radicalization.
