Reflection of cultural time code in Russian and English proverbial funds

It has been described the time concepts in the Russian and English proverbial funds. The units of time code verbalization are considered in the aspects of their cognitive determination and system language abilities that reveal the universality and specificity of linguocultural time representation. The given research is based on a systematic approach to the study of linguistic phenomena from the standpoint of traditional lexicographical, lexico-semantic and lexico-thematic analyzes, which allow to identify, describe and differentiate the linguistic means representing time codes in Russian and English proverbial funds and linguocultures. The proverbial funds of both languages demonstrate a wide range of means of direct and indirect time verbalization, which lead to possible intersections of different cultural codes in the aspect of their language actualization.

Key words: proverb, time code, culture code, direct and figurative meaning, cognition.
