Features of unit allocation functional semantic text field (on the story of a. P. Chekov "lady with dog")

It is considered the description of features of selection of units of functional-semantic text field (FSTP). The material of the study is A.P. Chekov 's story "Lady with Dog." The author emphasizes the need to classify the study of the functioning of language objects in specific texts, including artistic ones. Special attention is drawn to the fact that a prerequisite for the creation of FSTP is the involvement of extralinguistic information, which is important for the understanding of this text. It proves that the conclusions obtained by the creation of the FSTP can be considered deeply, accurately and objectively. They help to trace the connections of this FSTP with other common language and individual-author language objects. It is proposed an algorithm for selecting FSTP units.

Key words: field structure, functional-semantic text field, language unit, linguistic analysis of text, A.P. Chekov.
