

PEDAGOGY

Marina V. Samophalova, Tatyana A. Schepteva

(Southern federal university. Rostov-on-Don, Russian Federation)

Conditions for the formation of a trusting atmosphere in a teacher-student relationship in English classes in high school

It is discussed the importance of creating a trusting relationship between a teacher and a student. The causes of possible conflicts, as well as ways to overcome them, are described, the concepts of the psychological climate and educational motivation are revealed. The question is being raised about the formation of the right attitude towards learning. This article also describes the development processes in high school, when students undergo significant physiological and psychological changes, which in turn affect the attitude to learning and the general motivation of students. The article provides a detailed analysis of the objectives of the interaction between teacher and student, the achievement of which leads to the establishment of a positive attitude towards learning at senior students.

Key words: psychological climate, positive/neutral/negative attitude to study, motivation, educational motivation, personality-oriented approach, adolescence, high school.

November 11, 2019
