Opposition of the ending to other word morphemes

In the role of a significant part of the word, the ending performs the function of a service morpheme, which serves to reflect the relationship of the means of expression to the content of the word in the sentence. In the word form, it acts as an element indicating the relation of a given word to other words. Thus, a situation arises when the ending sharply opposes all other morphemes of the word, i.e. acts as an opposition to them. With the help of inflection, usually not new words are formed, but various syntactic forms of the same word.

Key words: significant part of the word, opposition, morpheme, word ending.
