

PHILOLOGY

Sergey M. Kravtsov, Anna P. Prokhorova

(Southern Federal University. Rostov-on-Don, Russian Federation; Academy of Civil Engineering and Architecture of the Don State Technical University. Rostov-on-Don, Russian Federation)

Phraseological units with the meaning of speaking as text-forming units (based on the material of French and Russian works of fiction)

It is considered French and Russian phraseological units that are semantically related to the process of speaking, which is implemented both orally and in writing. They are examined in terms of their text-forming potential in French and Russian works of fiction. The text-forming resource is studied with the help of a diverse approach to the analysis of phraseological units. This approach involves the consideration of units primarily in the functional aspect, as a result of which the emphasis is placed in particular on their use in the text or in its title in a usage or transformed form. When determining the text-forming capabilities of phraseological units, the author also takes into account their repeated use in microcontext and the ideographic area of their use.

Key words: idiom, phraseological unit, speaking, text formation, text-forming unit, transformed phraseological units, literary text.

January 11, 2021
