The professional union as a subject of environmental safety of the Russian society

The possibilities of the institute of trade unions in ensuring the environmental safety of modern Russian society are considered. The trade union is represented as an entity capable of improving the situation of workers not only in economic relations, but also beyond its borders in the socio-ecological sphere. It is noted that trade unions already have real tools to ensure environmental safety, namely a collective agreement, a collective agreement, and participation in tripartite commissions to regulate social and labor relations.

Key words: trade union, environmental safety, reproduction of workers, environment, collective agreement, tripartite commissions.
